RUMANIA GOES INTO AXIS AS FULL PARTNER

Seals Bonds With Nazis By Formally Joining Totalitarian

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Rumania sealed her bonds with Nazi Germany today by joining formally the expanding Axis line of treaty-plighted supporters.

Following Hungary into the bloc within four days, Rumania signed up as a member of the original Rome-Berlin-Tokyo 1936 military and economic alliance made here last Sept. 27, an official announcement said.

By this diplomatic stroke, Germany pushed the Axis across toward the Near East to a point less than 250 miles from the vital Dardanelles. However, Nazi leaders had already been in Rumania for several weeks.

Two other countries on the route of "drang nach Osten" (drive to the East) were expected to be the next to affiliate themselves with the alliance.

They were Bulgaria, which be-

ARMORED UNIT TRAINS UNDER LATEST RULES

All-Canadian Corps Overseas Benefits From Modern British Scheme

In ROSS NEW, SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 22.—(CP)—Organization and training of armored units to take their place in all-Canadian corps overseas, is being undertaken with the aid of all the modern British scheme of mechanized warfare.

Every effort is being made to make the brigade one of the prime of Canada's growing armaments. The 52 officers and non-commissioned officers from the armored brigade in England now receive special instruction.

WILL RETURN

Attached to various British armored regiments they go through battle maneuvers, work on rugged tank tracks and learn to take part in special school. They will return to Canada and bring the same amount of information to their units as Camp Borden, Ont.

One Canadian officer said the average United States tank at Camp Borden will be used exclusively for initial training and that specially designed Canadian-built tanks will be available when the armored units when they are ready for them. These tanks probably will be ones that could be used in actual combat.

Additional tank officers from British units also have gone to Canada to assist others until last summer, in the training at Camp Borden.

BEST FACILITIES

The Canadian here have the best facilities in Britain for learning more about tank warfare. Work on the tank tracks was their first job after they arrived and now they are advancing to the more complex tactics, considered fastest in the world.

One British official expressed deep admiration for the work of the Dominion after he had watched them only a few days. "Many of the men seem natural drivers of an armored unit," he said. One important factor was that the Canadian tank men are a rugged, hardy group who can stand up under the physical strain imposed on tank crews.

Huge Oil Still Is Demolished By Mystery Blast

ELDORADO, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The huge No. 4 still at the Linn Oil Refining company here was demolished by a mysterious explosion last night. The huge tubular distiller was immediately enveloped in flames.

The original blast was felt all over the city. It was followed by a series of less explosive, apparently caused when the flames reached the base of the distiller.

There was no immediate report of any casualties.

The Eldorado fire department and the refinery fire fighters came from the blast to the site, which was used for producing gasoline.

TOUGH TURKEY.... Strategists' Nightmare

BRITISH NAVAL BARRIER MOUNTAIN BARRIERS RIVER BARRIERS POSSIBLE RUSSIAN INVASION ROUTES

A military machine attempting to invade Turkey might run into tough going. Some of the finest—nearly Britain's in the World War—drifted up trying to do Turkey's unbelievably difficult terrain.

There were also hills that the Hitler-Mussolini party "decided the fate of Turkey." Turkey may have something to say about that. Turkey surely will give serious consideration to the device of Russia and Germany. But she may feel she is tough enough to do her own deciding. And how she decides may alter the course of the war.

She may mean to an hour request to prevent troop crossing. If she does, it may be because her price has been paid, rather than because she is an easy victim of bluffing.

On the other hand, Turkey may refuse to play her cards in secret at Russia and Germany. Turkey has an alliance with Britain, and has announced she will keep her hands off. If she does, the axis—or even an axis-Russian combination—may find invasion of Turkey a strategic nightmare.

Turkey is roughly a quadrangle, 300 by 1,000 miles. The eastern half stands on one of the most precipitous mountain country in the world. The mountainside would "cancel" any invasion from Russia along narrow valleys.

String-out columns would be ducks in a shooting gallery for Turkish flank attacks from the heights. HUNDREDS MILES OF TIMBER

The axis would have to invade through Turkey's Europe, which adds Greece, Thrace. That means a 100-mile advance through timber-floored, almost roadless hill country. Italy has already found that that sort of going is no military picnic.

Then the axis would come to another barrier, the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus. Greek Australian divisions left their bases on these shores for the World War. Their all attempts to penetrate flapped with terrific losses. And the Turks have increased their fortifications since then. But suppose the axis did accomplish that. In Turkey, impossible, forced the straits, and captured Istanbul. So what?

So the Turks fall back to some of the best natural defense lines in the world. Mountain ranges cross-axe Turkey like a wall. There aren't mountains, there are no natural lines. Central Turkey has desert, too, as additional support.

Turkey's coast is literally ringed with mountains which rise to the central plateau. The British navy in the Mediterranean controls the southern and western shores. Control of these ports means the Turks could be supplied and reinforced indefinitely by Britain, even if attacked simultaneously by Russia and the axis. While the invaders' lines lengthened with each advance, the Turkish lines would shorten.

Obviously, the axis wants to cross Turkey to get at the Near East oil fields. If Turkey decides to fight, axis troops must cross at least 800 miles of murderous going before they reach the oil gulf.

BEST FIGHTERS IN THE BALKANS

There would be no mean chance to move an army across this tangled up-and-down without opposition. But the wise would not expect a long fight. Turkey has more of them than tanned prize. They're admittedly the best fighters in the Balkans, and they know the ground. They'll fight a share of the spoils if the permit free passage of axis troops. It can happen, because Turkey has followed Russia's lead in the past.

If Turkey stands fast by Britain, however, the axis drive to the East might be staid indefinitely. But, if Turkey is a bait in a country like Turkey where there is a succession of foregone.

Some of the new recruits reached here on Thursday but the largest single contingent arrived on the morning of Friday. The Calgary detachment came in on early Friday, the trains arriving through the day, by car and by bus.

At the first camp, by the way, the men were trained in the use of the machine gun, the rifle, the bayonet, and the hand grenade. They were also trained in the use of the gas mask, the trench, and the fox hole.

Looking them Over

by JACK KELLY

New Conception Growing

Over at the university there is a new conception of sport responsibility taking form that promises to eventually brighten the Alberta picture from one end of the province to the other and provide illumination in many other parts of Canada.

This growing idea took on its first tangible form the other day when the Big Block A club of the University of Alberta got together and decided to launch a campaign effort to keep Block A alumni interested in getting behind sport wherever they happen to be now—cities, towns or rural communities.

At this point I had better go into parentheticals and explain that the Block A men are those who particularly distinguish themselves in athletics at the University of Alberta and are awarded a big block letter A in gold to wear on sweaters or blouses.

Out here in the west we are just finishing a pioneer stage of building development in which the predominant thought was of the immediate present. What thought we have given to the future was largely in the form of concrete objects such as bridges, roads, schools and so on. The idea of developing leadership has been almost from time to time, but it has generally been taken to mean a dynamic contribution to politics, industry or business.

Much of A. men will remember that from time to time vague suggestions were handed out in lecture that university men were expected to do more for their communities than just reside in them as much as less law abiding citizens. Indefinite and hazy as these suggestions were, it must be admitted that some of them have produced results. Maybe the men in question would have done their bit, university or not, but the fact remains that definite contributions have been made.

If you live in a city or large town you will realize that there is almost a demand for able men and women who will work for the public welfare. And there is the time greater in the smaller towns and rural areas and especially in the matter of work for boys and girls.

The residents of these communities are not to blame for the situation. They are probably as generous and public-spirited as any, but they simply don't know how to organize and train teams, form leagues and keep things going. It is here that men who took part in sport at university can play a vital part.

Don't get me wrong. I don't think for a minute that a degree from a university or a Block A gives a man ability that others do not possess. There are probably dozens of communities in Alberta that have been changed from just another name on the map into outstanding centres through the drive and ability supplied by a man or group of men who never got farther than public school.

As Jim Patton, the new athletic director at the University of Alberta, points out in lecture that university men are expected to act as leaders from day early training for boys and girls. Even in Edmonton there are few schools that provide anything more in the way of coaching. Teachers have the kids on a football or a basketball and teach them up to it. Down in the smaller towns, however, where there are no staffs and equipment that the majority of Canadian universities can boast of, Patton plans to do everything in his power to reach out and assist and assist in high schools and even public schools throughout the province. It is a field in which, among others, you are possible.

Eastern Stars On Spot

PROBABLY no sport writer in the west has been waging a battle or more persistent battle against the clique of old boys in the way that the man who entered the Canadian Rugby Union than in the way and when this said man has been in the club and you don't have to expect me to give them the works with no holds barred.

The Old Boys are on such a spot today, but I'm not blasting them—at least not on their most vulnerable side which is that they are deliberately refusing to sanction the proposed east-west football final and thereby refuse to acknowledge the existence of a championship to enjoy sport equipment purchased with an anticipated profit of $10,000 from such a game.

In times like these, that refusal to help out the men on active duty, who would be made into a nasty weapon to swing at the stubborn Old Boys down out.

However if I did use this attack I would be doing the very thing that I'm battling the Old Boys about—distorting facts to achieve some particular end. It makes too much of politics for me.

Actually you can charge the referee with refusing to help make life a little happier for active service men. Over a year ago they said that unless the west played eastern rules they fall that the west would not be eligible for a Dominion final under C. R. sponsorship. No one at that time might have been able to see the wisdom of that warren. That suggestion came later in a move to obtain a level to force a Dominion final. As a result of it the Old Boys found themselves accident on a job—put in their helmet in putting the west on the spot.

The C.R.U. now can hardly turn around on a telephone wire and reverse the decision it made in full annual meeting on the most serious problem on its agenda.

I feel I do think that if the Old Boys have any sporting blood left in them that they should quietly tell the Ottawa Roughriders that the C.R.U. will not raise any flag if Ottawa enters the proposed east-west football final and thereby refuse to acknowledge the existence of a championship to enjoy sport equipment purchased with an anticipated profit of $10,000 from such a game.

Such a move would save the C.R.U. in the clear since the union would not be sanctioning the game. The annual meeting did not say that the C.R.U. had to read the riot act to any eastern club that fell into taking the western championship as a charity affair.

There are times when an effort even can be gracefully closed, or left open and blackened for a long time to come.

Care of YOUR EYES Begins at Home Most people like to read in bed and it can be done easily if you are well propped up with pillows. The first line is that you may recline with the head slightly raised, consequently forcing the eye muscles to strain down in an over-straining position. Then, too, the light must be good and the sight normal, or made so with the properly prescribed glasses.

Yes, A.K. asks: Is there a blind spot in everyone's eye? Reply: Yes. There is a small slightly raised spot at the back of each eye at the junction of the optic nerve. This is insensitive to light and hence is "blind."

Yes, M.C. writes: Why are glasses needed when sight seems normal? Answer: Perfect distance vision is not a guarantee that your eyes are normal. Many people require "rest" classes, or refraction lenses that really act as a sedative for nervously injured people.

Armored Car Protects Queen From Bomb Splinters

Because of the ever-present menace of bomb splinters and shrapnel from anti-aircraft shells, Queen Elizabeth now rides about bomb-blasted London on her superior hours in an armored car. Her majesty is shown alighting from the splinter-proof jagged hull here during a visit to a bombed area. The car is proof against all but a direct hit. There was an air raid "alert" at the time this picture was taken.

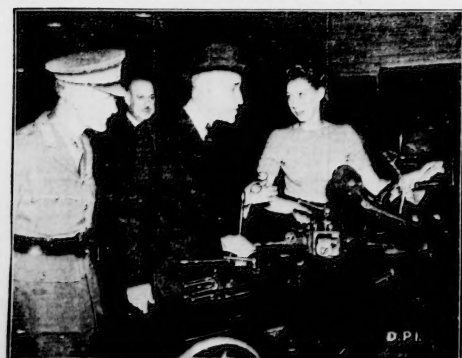

Military Burial For A Faithful Horse

A faithful army servant, retired in action, gets a pouring salute from the firing squad when buried with full military honors at Fort Wadsworth, N. Y. Funeral was for Chitina, 16-year-old bay mare, prize of the Chinese army jumping team and favorite with National Horse Show crowds for many years. She died during practice workout before final day of show. Chitina was personal mount of Chilean team captain, Major Eduardo Yanes, presently the Horse Show's individual military jumping star.

After Winter Storm Lashed Great Lakes

The ice-bound bridge of the freighter "Joseph Bloch" gives a clue as to the fury of break water storms which swept Great Lake region, paralyzing shipping and killing at least 100. Capt. Howard Kiser, lucky to be alive, stands at his post after manning the sinking freighter into Lake Michigan's Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Women In Industry

As more men are called out for military training and service, large numbers of women are being absorbed into the war industry of Canada. Memorabilia J. L. Kallin, minister of national defence, is shown here at his desk with a woman worker at the first gun plant.

Heroic Work After London Bombing

These three pictures made in the east end of London are typical of the activity throughout the city after every German air raid. In the top picture air raid wardens and civilian volunteers are shown carrying a woman from beneath the shambles of her home in which she had been trapped. In the center is a general view of a wrecked tenement, the model of which wardens and firemen are searching for bodies and injured. One injured man is seen at the lower right, being helped to safety. At the bottom we see an injured man being aided to a first aid station after he had been removed from his wrecked home. His discolored face and clothes tell of his lucky escape from death.

MATA HARI'S DAUGHTER

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
THE platinum blonde suddenly remembered that she had to write some letters and left Brinda with Larsen.
"I somewhat envy you to belong to a neutral country during this awful war. Mr. Larsen, Brinda remarked, "for after all, Denmark has nothing to fear."
"No, nothing," Larsen replied. Then he looked at the waiter with a grin. "Thanks for the coffee, Konrad!"
They were interrupted by the assistant purser, who apologetically bowed in front of Brinda. "Forgive me, Miss Duncan, but will you be good enough to follow me into the office of the Chief Purser?"
Automated, Brinda looked at Larsen, who seemed to share her surprise. She promised to return in a minute and followed the assistant purser into his chief's office.
When on entering, the chief purser apologized deeply for not having had time to call on her, and concluded his speech with, "The Commander wishes to talk to you, Miss Duncan, he is good enough to follow me." She was escorted to the Commander's cabin. He was a small man with piercing black eyes, a high forehead, Brinda could not take her eyes off his shiny black hair, he made her sit down, his face smiling and placing his hands as he was going to offer her the topaz suite on board.
"Miss Duncan, beginning tonight you shall be in custody—separated from all other passengers."
"You mean, a prisoner?" Brinda murmured, profoundly shocked.
"Sorry... if you care to call it by such a ugly name."
"But you can't do that to me, my passport is in perfect order."
"I am sorry, Miss Duncan, I have an order here from our Ambassador regarding your person."
"Your Ambassador? Where?"
"Berlin."
Light suddenly dawned in Brinda's mind. She knew now this was not right to her surprise. It enraged her to be locked up, made captive. The one she suspected must have given her away, but she had one hope left.
"Perhaps this would come in time and help. This was her only hope, she gave orders to the purser to Dutch, then turned back to Brinda with his fly smiling.
"Miss Duncan, you shall be locked in a stateroom. It has a port-hole, but I would advise you not to use it. In war time we seldom see passengers overboard."
A few minutes later, Brinda sank down on the stateroom couch, as she heard the key click from the outside. After a sleepless night, she rose for her breakfast and asked Nippy to bring her some food.
